

How the 'person' is used to deceive you

First uploaded 23rd of August 2023 - [last edited 23rd of August 2023]

By Aurelsson

If you look at your own life you probably have used forms of identification or government issued instruments all your life. Birth certificate, passport, drivers license, various ID cards, various licenses, contracts etc. Wherever you go or whatever you want to do in society, you either need to show identification, repetitively fill in signed forms or both.

There is almost no way around the fact that you need to use a piece of paper or plastic to identify yourself or produce signed documents. It is so normal that almost nobody really takes a good look at what this really is.

The important thing to realize is that there are two of you. The real you, who has a physical body and the fictional you, the person in the passport. The person is the fiction that is portrayed on the identification, on the forms or on other documents. Everything starts and ends with the person. The person is the main enabler for the (legal) system to work.

The person is a fictional being, existing only on paper and is technically called a legal fiction. Other legal fictions are countries, states, various types of kingdoms, provinces, counties, towns, corporations and all other creations within the legal system that can be called upon in the court of law.

The person and every legal fiction is also a dead being.

At any point in time there are two of you, one fake and one real. The (legal) system can only deal with the first one, the fake one, the legal fiction. By using the person cleverly, the system assumes control over the real man or real woman.

Every man or woman who has a birth certificate and its other derivative documents like a passport, has a person. It is important to realize that no man or woman who has a physical body and is considered to be a living being, is a person. Technically they only have a person. This is, because, as said before, there are two of you. The man or woman carries the person around. The real one carries the fake one in their wallet.

The link between the real man/woman and the person works only when the real man or woman acts as if they are the fiction. In simple words: when you pretend to be the person in the document, you fuse them together. They become one and at this point the legal system has control over not only the person, but most importantly over the real man/woman.

The key to comprehending the legal system is to separate the fiction from the real. Realizing you are not the legal fiction. You are not the person.

Without the person, there is no legal system, because the system cannot deal with real beings, only with dead entities, like the person. The person, in practical terms, is a photo and some details about the photo. It is important to comprehend that the photo is not the living individual portrayed on the photo. The photo and its details are completely different from the living being. Both are incommensurable. The living man and the person are two entirely separate things. They are not even alike, because they do not share the same attributes. A living being has a physical body, awareness and is animate. A photo is a piece of inanimate paper or plastic with paint on it and has a certain contrast. The man or woman is not the person.

It might help to reflect on this and to think about how you perceive this concept.

The living individual and the person are two completely separate things. The living being is real and the person is illusionary or not real. Yet, most living beings use the person as if they are the person.

For example, when you make a contract with any legal fiction in society, you do it as if you are the person. You act on behalf of the person. Almost everything is in person: when you buy groceries, when you book a flight, when you pay your taxes, when you take out a loan, when you get married, when you apply for a license and even when you die. Anything you do that requires an ID, a signature or your consent, you actually do in person. You are acting on behalf of the person.

What happens in reality is that the living being acts out a role of psychological influence upon another living individual to go around their business in society. They are pretending to be a dead being and are animating it, just to be able to function as society demands.

Of course all of this only happens in the mind. It is of paramount importance to comprehend this concept: There are two worlds: One is reality where we see living bodies walking around and doing things. The other world is the one in our mind, where concepts and ideas influence our behavior in the real world.

The domain of the person is entirely in the mind, entirely fictional and entirely illusionary. It is not real. The bridge between these two worlds is the human behavior. Your behavior is what we see in reality manifesting from the mind. The tool for it is the paper or plastic person.

As nobody can be two things simultaneously, you quickly realize that a deception is being played out here. The person is the tool of deception.

You would say that judges do have influence over reality and the real man or woman. That is only true indirectly and only by consent of the living individual.

A judge in the legal system only has jurisdiction over the person, not the living individual. This is an indisputable fact. Jurisdiction means to 'speak the law', i.e. to rule over and control. Jurisdiction in the legal system can only and is only established over the legal fiction, the person, and never over the man or woman.

This is because the judge is a representative of the state and the state is the only one who ever issued a birth certificate. In other words, the state made the person (the legal fiction called the birth certificate) on the request of the parents of the baby. The baby was alive and the state made a second being, albeit a dead being. The baby is alive, the person of the baby, the birth certificate is dead. Because the state made the birth certificate, the state owns the person and thus can rule over it.

The state never made a living physical body, so it cannot rule over that. That living body was made by a process of a man and woman coming together to fertilize an egg and sperm cell that would grow into a new physical body. The moment the parents registered their baby with the state, they technically requested a new being to be made and also gave away the baby to the state. As the parents confirmed the baby to be the person, the state acquired full control over the physical body and its person.

No law says 'no man/woman shall do x, y, z.' It is always written as 'no person shall do x,y, z.' That is the caveat of the state controlling the person, but not the physical body. When the physical body confirms to be the person, then at that moment the state also controls that physical body alongside its person.

Think about the difference between man/woman and person for a moment. It is subtle, but extremely important.

The major deception is this: The system has you believe, in your mind, that you are the person. This is a major part of it all.

Notice the word 'believe' there, which means trusting somebody else's testimony without any proof. In other words, you falsely assume that you are the person. You can never be the person, because you are a living being. You are not dead if you read this, so you must be alive. When you are alive you cannot be dead.

A person is a dead fiction construct that has no basis in reality. So the moment that you are deceived, is the moment that you accept that you are the person.

You can see the massive consequences in this error: As the judge has jurisdiction only over the person, and at the same time the living individual plays out in their head that they actually are that person, the legal system has full control over the living individual through the mind of the living individual. Just stop and think about this last paragraph. Just take a moment to contemplate this. Re-read it if it might help.

It is a hallucination that directly influences your behavior. It makes you do things that you either like or in most cases, do not like.

The trick of the deception is having you believe that you are something that you are not.

In your mind you have equated two things that are not the same. You have made an error, but you do not know you have made that error. You do not know that you have been deceived.

Well if it is your wish, how do you correct that error? As you do not know you made an error, you will not go about correcting it, because there is no motivation to do anything, because there is no knowledge that you have to do anything.

Only an external impetus will tell you that the two things that you have equated, are, in fact, not the same. Somebody points that out to you for example or you have a strong experience in society that something is wrong.

Because this error exists in your mind and your mind is susceptible to influence that is either beneficial to you or harming to you, the programming that was already in the mind, kicks in.

You either reject the error, if the programming is very strong. If the programming has been too much, it has been ingrained within your security system, popularly known as 'fight' or 'flight'. When you reject it, it is because it is perceived as a threat to your security and safety. It touches your primal instincts and rejection will neutralize the threat. You then ignore it and move on with your life.

If you do not reject it and are open to it, you might have the capacity to be inquisitive, to ask questions and to start thinking about it and investigate it. With some logic, thinking and general life observation, you quickly grasp the error.

After this, you can choose to ignore the error or make a prompt to correct it, which will eventually show in your behavior.

So how to correct it?

Simply by realizing that the two things are not equal.

This has massive consequences on so many levels. You will realize that everything you have done in your life was acting as a fiction or dead being. You have done activities like paying taxes, voting, marrying, buying things, traveling, driving etc. as if you were that fiction, acting all your life.

You were pretending all your life and great suffering has been a result of it by being coerced into doing things you did not want to do under the threat of violence vested in the legal law.

Things like paying taxes, getting licenses, paying fines, going to jail, being limited by the law itself, paying interest and being disadvantaged by certain contracts are just a few unnatural things that many people feel they 'had to do' to get along.

If you comprehend that a judge in any court of law, only has power over the legal fiction, i.e. the person and all its variants, then you can see the deception. If you realize that the legal system only can have power over you when it knows you exist and can deal with you if and only if you act as if you are the person, then you see the deception.

When you see the deception, you know the truth as well.

The truth is that you are not the person and throwing that deception back at the judge will halt any legal process and you will win.

How do you throw it back at the judge? Simply by not identifying with the person. Simply by telling the judge that if you would pretend to be the person, you would be lying. Simply by stating firmly and strongly that you are not the person.

Just speak the truth and you will win.